PREAMBLE

THE PURPOSE OF THIS GUIDE is to explain the different types of farmland access agreements and to provide samples. The Land Conservancy of BC (TLC) supports and encourages agreements that:

- give farmers tenure similar to that of owning land, and
- include terms for environmentally supportive farm management practices.

TLC provides access to land for farming by holding donated or purchased farmland in trust for farming. Farmers have access to TLC farmland through various types of agreements (leases, profits à prendre, licences or memorandums of understanding). Each section of this document is designed to act as a stand-alone information source on the different types of farmland rental agreements. To the best of our knowledge, this is the first easily accessible compilation of basic information and models of leases, profits à prendre, licences and memorandums of understanding related to BC farmland access.

As a farmland trust, TLC has a mandate to “protect farmland for farming.” A goal of the TLC 2008 Agriculture Strategic Plan is to “serve as BC’s Farmland Trust by providing resources, information and expertise for the public and land trust community.” This Guide supports farmland owners and new or continuing farmers by assisting with access to land for sustainable agriculture.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

AS BC LAND PRICES RISE, and farmland vanishes under housing and country estates, farmers struggle for affordable access to land in the Lower Mainland, Southern Vancouver Island and the Okanagan. One means of affordable farmland access is through rental agreements with landowners. This Guide from The Land Conservancy of BC (TLC) provides landowners, farmers, communities and other land trusts with information on and models for these farmland access agreements.<sup>1</sup> This Guide assists you in:

- understanding which agreement(s) may be best suited to a particular situation;
- understanding the implications of each agreement for farm classification and bona fide farmer status; and
- knowing what questions to ask, and of whom; for example, whether an agreement requires permission from the Agricultural Land Commission, or whether liability insurance is needed

It focuses on two general categories of agreements: long-term agreements (10 years or more) and short, trial period agreements. Additional information is provided on topics such as taxation, financing, and accounting for equity.<sup>2</sup>

For farmers, a lease is the ideal agreement for long-term farmland access as it conveys most of the rights of a landowner other than the right to sell the land or degrade it unreasonably. Leases can be registered on title, meaning the lease runs with the land, no matter who owns it. However, a lease is not possible or suitable for all situations. For example, it is very difficult to get approval from the Agricultural Land Commission (ALC) for multiple registered leases on one title in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR). In another situation, a short-term agreement would be more suitable for a “trial period” before committing to a longer-term, more binding relationship such as a lease.

Although not often used outside the forestry and mining sectors, a profit à prendre can also be registered on title and can be used in many situations, especially in those where multiple agreements on one parcel of land are sought. A profit à prendre implies or states the rights necessary to remove an item, such as crops, including the right to enter the land and use as much of the surface as necessary (e.g., crops, timber, game, minerals). The thing removed must be part of the land, and it can be owned.

Licenses and memoranda of understanding do not grant an interest in land, cannot be registered and only apply to the people who sign them. For example, if the land is sold, the new owner is not bound by the licence. If the person with the licence passes away, the estate cannot transfer the licence to the heirs unless stated so in the licence. If licences and memoranda of understanding meet certain criteria, they can be considered contracts and come within the law of

1 The farmland access agreements can be:

- between a land trust, as landowner, and the farmer(s)
- between a community organization, such as a non-profit society, as landowner, and the farmer(s)
- between a private landowner and the farmer(s)
- between a land trust, as landowner, and a community organization who in turn has an agreement with the farmer(s)
- between a provincial or local government and a farmer
- between a provincial or local government and a community organization who in turn has an agreement with a farmer.
- between a company and a farmer, or company and community organization who in turn has an agreement with a farmer.

2 I.e., the farmer receives return on their investment when they leave the land, as they would if they owned and sold the land at the end of their tenure.

contracts. These types of agreements may be suitable to shorter-term agreements between a landowner and farmer prior to committing to a longer-term agreement or where multiple agreements on one parcel of land are desired and the land is in no danger of being sold, for example, when the land is held by a land trust.

A landowner's eligibility for farm classification and hence bona fide farmer status can be affected if more than one farmer is sharing the piece of land. For example, if three farmers have separate agreements on one parcel of land, BC Assessment will consider each business separately, and each business will need to meet farm income levels for farm classification. On the other hand, BC Assessment may consider all incomes together if the farmers form a legal entity such as a cooperative and the cooperative (not the individual farmers) holds the lease.

As a starting point, good agreements are only possible when all parties are honest, equitable and flexible. Everyone involved should have a clear and common understanding of the terms in the agreement to ensure that the agreement is enforceable over the duration of the relationship between the parties.

Finally, the intent of this Guide is not to cover every possible contingency related to farmland access agreements you might encounter. Laws change, and each rental situation is unique. Hence special consideration should be given to the drafting of every agreement. The information provided in this Guide is not legal advice and should not be relied upon as such. Consult legal counsel when drafting farmland access agreements.

I.0 INTRODUCTION

FARMLAND ACCESS AGREEMENTS, such as leases, give farmers access to land without requiring them to have the capital necessary to purchase increasingly expensive land (e.g., in some areas of southern BC, farmland can be $70,000 to $100,000/acre). Currently, about 41 percent of farmland in BC is rented by farmers.<sup>3</sup>

Good agreements are only possible when all parties are honest, equitable and flexible. Strong relationships are a key factor in having a positive experience renting farmland, whether you are the landowner or the farmer. Relationship building should occur before signing an agreement.

Drafting a farmland access agreement serves several purposes. First of all, writing up an agreement together can draw out hidden assumptions by both parties and allows them to be clarified before entering into an agreement. Clear communication is a necessary part of developing a strong relationship and the process of drafting an agreement can be an aid in that process. Secondly, by using this Guide to develop a draft agreement you may reduce your legal fees. While a lawyer should review your legal agreement, by having a draft available for your lawyer, your lawyer can concentrate on editing your document rather than spending extra time drafting an agreement from scratch. Having an agreement to provide legal support if there is a dispute is important, but should not be the primary reason for drafting an agreement. The agreement should be used as a tool to strengthen relations, not to push them in a negative direction.

Farmland access agreements are complex, and every party, farm operation and property is unique. We hope this Guide will provide you with sufficient baseline information to:

- understand the basic legal background of the different types of access agreements,
- select an agreement type appropriate for your needs and situation,
- draft a basic agreement using the sample agreements and provide it for review by your lawyer(s), and
- know when and where to seek answers to specific questions (e.g., when to talk with BC Assessment or the Agricultural Land Commission).

If you are a land trust, please see Appendix B for specific information regarding farm access agreements.

The information and agreement models in this Guide are intended to help farmers, landowners, community organizations, land trusts and others understand what options they have when it comes to land access agreements. Each section can act as a stand-alone information source. This Guide focuses on two categories of agreements: long-term agreements (10-plus years), and shorter, “trial period” type agreements. The overall goal is to encourage agreements that give farmers tenure similar to that of owning the land and that integrate environmentally sustainable farm management practices.

The types of access agreements covered in this Guide include:

- Leases,
- Profits à prendre,
- Licenses and
- Memoranda of understanding.

For each type of access agreement, this Guide outlines:

- whether the agreement can be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority (the registry that oversees all land transactions and records interests on title to property),
- whether multiple agreements are possible on one parcel of land (inside and outside of the Agricultural Land Reserve),
- how long the agreement can last and how it can be terminated,
- whether a mortgage can be taken out against the agreement,
- whether sub-agreements are possible and
- suggested scenarios for use.

An overview of the above information can be found in Table 1, Summary Farmland Access Agreements (page 5).

A Frequently Asked Questions (FAQ) section will assist you with some of the fundamental questions around access agreements. A list of resources and glossary can be found at the end of this guide.

A model for each type of access agreement is presented in Appendix A. Each model includes optional terms for land trusts, addressing topics such as Whole Farm Management Plans and accounting for equity.<sup>4</sup>

Appendix B is directed towards land trusts renting out farmland. Appendix C discusses subdivision and enforceability issues related to leases. Appendix D is a checklist for you when constructing your own agreements. Finally, Appendix E discusses using an easement with a lease as one means of providing access to part of a parcel of land without needing to go through the subdivision process.

The following information is not covered in this Guide:

- Crown (provincial or federal government) Intensive or Extensive agricultural leases or Crown grazing licences,
- fee simple purchase, life estates, gifts, grants or wills, and
- tax and insurance implications of the agreements discussed in this Guide.

Farmers and landowners entering into an agreement should fully investigate and address tax and insurance implications before signing. For example, the agreement may affect your capital gains exemption and/or your tax deferred rollover to children.

1.1 Land ownership in Canada

IN CANADA, THE CROWN is the absolute owner of the land. When you hold a title to a piece of land, you actually hold an “estate” in the land. An estate<sup>5</sup> in land is a bundle of rights but is less than absolute ownership. In general, the categories of estates in land, outside of absolute ownership by the Crown, include:

1. Fee simple: This is the largest “estate” known in law and is what most people think of as owning private property. Fee simple gives the owner a larger bundle of proprietary rights to the land than other estates, including the right to exclude and to use, within the bounds of the law.
2. Other estates: Life estates and similar estates provide fewer rights than fee simple and are not common in property law in North America.
3. Lease: A lease is where a landowner gives exclusive possession of a property or a portion of a property to a tenant. A landowner’s rights to actual possession of the land are suspended during a lease.<sup>6</sup>

Although a profit à prendre is an interest in land<sup>7</sup> and can be registered on the land title like a lease, it is not an estate in land with the associated bundle of rights. Licences and memoranda of understanding are not estates in land. They cannot be registered on title. They can be contracts and fall under contract law if they meet certain criteria.

IT IS IMPORTANT to note that the legal distinction between types of farmland access agreements depends on the actual relationship between the parties, and not what the parties decide to call the agreement. For example, if you decide to call your agreement a “lease” but the actual relationship is more like a contract, your agreement may be viewed in law as a licence or a memorandum of understanding and you will not receive the benefits of a lease.

1.2 Get it in writing

ALL FARMLAND ACCESS AGREEMENTS should be in writing for clarity of communication and legal security for both parties. Putting an agreement in writing is not a sign of distrust; it is a way to ensure a continued good relationship by:

- clarifying responsibilities and providing a basis for negotiation in lieu of court proceedings if there is a disagreement,
- acting as a guide for successors if either landowner or person making use of the land dies or becomes incapacitated and
- providing documentation for tax purposes.

It is important to note that BC’s Law and Equity Act, section 39, states that a contract respecting land or the disposition of land is not enforceable unless (a) there is, in writing signed by the party to be charged or by that party’s agent, both an indication that it has been made and a reasonable indication of the subject matter. This means that an agreement dealing with land, such as a lease, must be in writing for it to be enforceable.

1.3 Characteristics of a successful agreement<sup>8</sup>

WHEN ENTERING INTO A FARMLAND RENTAL AGREEMENT, you need to consider more than the price when making a decision. Characteristics of a successful agreement include:

- Compatibility: Do you have a similar vision? Can differences in opinion be discussed?
- Honesty: Do you trust each other?
- Clarity: Do you clearly understand the terms of the agreement? Are those terms in writing?
- Equitability: Are the agreement terms fair to each of you?
- Flexibility: Can the agreement be amended if changes occur?
- Suitability: Is the agreement suitable to the type of farm operation and does it encourage sustainable practices?

1.4 How to use this Guide

To make the best use of this Guide

1. Make a list of your needs and questions around farmland access.
2. Talk to the other people involved to understand their needs and questions.
3. Read the introductory sections on each type of agreement.
4. Discuss the information with the other party(s) and your lawyer to decide on an appropriate legal model (lease, profit à prendre, licence, memorandum of understanding).
5. Use the sample agreements in Appendix A and the Agreement Completion Checklist in Appendix D to help draft an agreement with the other parties and your lawyer that is best suited to your situation.

2.0 LEASES

THE FOLLOWING PROVIDES GENERAL INFORMATION on leases to assist you in developing your own lease agreement.

2.1 What is a lease?

A lease is an estate in land<sup>9</sup> (a type of interest in land<sup>10</sup>) and gives a person all of the use and occupation rights of a landowner to a piece of land or portion of land for a determined period of time in exchange for rent paid to the landowner. The property owner retains the right to dispose of the land while the tenant has exclusive possession of the land under the lease and the responsibility of maintaining it according to the terms in the lease. When the lease is over, the land reverts to the landowner.

2.2 Registration on the title to the land<sup>11</sup>

As an interest in land, leases can be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority on the title to the property. A registered lease is subject to the same Land Title Act requirements as a fee simple lot. When registered, leases “run with the land,” which means that when the land is sold, the lease is transferred to the new landowner along with the title to the land. A registered lease also ensures that the agreement is legally recognized as a lease and cannot be interpreted as another type of agreement, such as a contract, that does not give any rights in land. See Frequently Asked Questions About Farmland Access Agreements for more information on registration and legal security.

2.3 Multiple leases on one parcel of land or one lease on part of a parcel<sup>12</sup>

Leases on part of a parcel of land and longer than three years, or that have the option to be extended past three years, are considered subdivisions under Section 73 of the Land Title Act. Before the lease(s) can be registered, the subdivision process must be followed and granted approval by an approving officer. The type of approving officer depends on where the property is located. Properties in municipalities gain approval from municipal approving officers (usually the Director of Planning or Engineering). Rural subdivisions that are in electoral areas of regional districts seek approval from the Ministry of Transportation and Highways through the regional district or Islands Trust. Property covered by the Nisga’a Agreement gains approval from the Nisga’a approving officer. If the property is in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR), permission for subdivision is required from the Agricultural Land Commission (ALC).

Two types of subdivision are possible. One is the standard fee simple subdivision where the parcel of land is permanently divided into separate lots. The second is a leasehold subdivision, which expires at the end of the lease. Unlike a fee simple subdivision, the portion of the land receiving subdivision approval under a leasehold subdivision cannot be transferred (e.g., sold) separately from the remainder of the parcel. A leasehold subdivision still requires approval from an approving officer. Although approval of leasehold subdivisions generally undergoes the same process as fee simple subdivisions, the approving officer may not require the same service and other requirements. For example, approval of a leasehold subdivision may not require construction of roads and installation of utilities. Note that the longer the term of the lease, the more likely that subdivision and zoning requirements will need to be met. Subdivision approval will be based, in part, on local zoning bylaws.

10 Interest in land: “A comprehensive term to describe any right, claim, or privilege that an individual has toward real ... property.” West’s Encyclopedia of American Law, edition 2. Copyright 2008 The Gale Group, Inc.

11 An unregistered lease may still be seen as legally valid. However, an unregistered lease may not legally be seen as an interest in land.

12 Due to changes in the Land Title Act (2007), a lease on a portion of a property longer than three years or having the option of extending beyond three years that did not go through the subdivision approval process may not be unenforceable. See Appendix B.

If the property is in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR), permission for subdivision is also required from the Agricultural Land Commission.

2.4 Lease on the entire parcel

One lease on the entire parcel of land is not considered a subdivision, and permission from an approving officer and the Agricultural Land Commission is not required.

2.5 How long can a lease last, and how is it terminated?<sup>13</sup>

LEASES CAN BE FOR ANY LENGTH OF TIME. A lease terminates:

- at the end of the specified term in the lease,
- when the tenant voluntarily gives up the lease with permission of the landlord (surrender),
- when the tenant purchases the leased property from the landlord (merger),
- when the landlord defaults on any mortgage on the land and the mortgagee begins foreclosure proceedings (foreclosure),
- when the landlord gives notice to the tenant (notice),
- when the landlord re-enters because the tenant has not been following their obligations under the lease (re-entry) and
- when a court orders the lease terminated (court order).

If a lease is registered, it is binding on the purchaser of the land for the term of the lease. A registered lease is not terminated when the land is sold unless there is a clause in the lease stating so. A lease can pass to the successors on both sides unlike a contract (e.g., licence or memorandum of understanding), unless the contract stipulates it is to pass to the heirs.

2.6 Mortgage

A TENANT CAN OBTAIN A MORTGAGE AGAINST A LEASE. A lease agreement should stipulate if a mortgage is allowed and under what terms. See Frequently Asked Questions About Farmland Access Agreements for further information.

2.7 Sublease

A LEASE CAN (and is recommended to) stipulate if the lease holder can create a sublease<sup>14</sup>. A sublease is a lease agreement between the tenant and a third party for all or part of the leased land. The original lease between the tenant and the landowner remains in place.

Under a sublease, the third party takes over all or part of the leased land and activities. However, the original tenant, unless released from liability by the landowner, is still liable for the obligations under their original lease with the landowner, including payment of rent.

A sublease can be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority. A registered sublease is considered a subdivision of the land if it is for three or more years and it is on only part of the land, in which case the applicable subdivision process and approvals are required.

<sup>13</sup> Gamble, R.W. October 2001. Land lease arrangements. Ontario Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs, AGDEX 812.

<sup>14</sup> A sublease is different from an assignment of a lease. An assignment is a complete transfer of the lease to a new tenant.

2.8 Suggested scenarios for use

FROM A FARMER'S PERSPECTIVE, a lease is the most desirable type of long-term farmland access agreement because it creates a situation very similar to that of owning the land. From a landowner perspective, a lease may decrease the value of the property if the owner is planning on selling before the term of the lease expires.

Leasing and subleasing part of a property, both in and outside of the ALR, where registration on the title to the land is desired may prove challenging and expensive because of subdivision requirements.

If multiple farmers or farm businesses will be leasing different sections of the same property, it may be easier, less time-consuming and more cost-efficient to use a different type of agreement, such as a profit à prendre or licence, that does not involve the subdivision process. Alternatively, the leases do not have to be registered. However, an unregistered lease will not “run with the land,” and there is a risk it would not be recognized as an “interest in land” if challenged in court. For more information on the legal security of long-term leases and subdivision, see Appendix C, Enforcement of Long Term Leases and Subdivision.

Another strategy is for multiple farmers is to form a single legal entity such as a cooperative or a partnership and enter into one lease on the entire property. Finally, if a lease on only part of a parcel of land is desired, it may be possible to use a lease with an appurtenant easement (see Appendix E).

2.9 Miscellaneous

FARMLAND AND ASSOCIATED HOUSING leased under one agreement falls under the Commercial Tenancy Act, not the Residential Tenancy Act. According to the Residential Tenancy Act, section 4, it does not apply to: “living accommodation included with premises that (i) are primarily occupied for business purposes, and (ii) are rented under a single agreement.” The Residential Tenancy Act also does not apply to “(i) living accommodations rented under a tenancy agreement that has a term longer than 20 years.”

Ideally, if a farmer wishes to use a house on leased property, the house should be leased under a separate agreement. If the farmland and the house on the land are leased in two separate agreements, the Commercial Tenancy Act applies to the land and the Residential Tenancy Act applies to the house. The farmer has greater tenancy protection under the Residential Tenancy Act than the Commercial Tenancy Act. The Commercial Tenancy Act is landlord oriented in its approach.

3.0 PROFIT À PRENDRE

THE FOLLOWING PROVIDES GENERAL INFORMATION on profits à prendre to assist you in tailoring your own agreement.

3.1 What is a profit à prendre?

A profit à prendre (profit) is an interest in land<sup>15</sup> and gives a person the right to enter another's land and take something from the land such as crops, timber, pasture, fish, game or minerals. The thing taken must be part of the land and be capable of being owned. A profit cannot include water. A profit agreement either implies or states the rights needed to enjoy the thing taken. This would include the right to enter the land and the right to use as much of the surface as necessary, including buildings. Although a profit is an interest in land, it is less than an estate in land<sup>16</sup> and therefore does not involve exclusive possession, unlike a lease. In respect to oil and gas, the Canadian courts have found that a profit does not create a landlord-tenant relationship for the purposes of re-entry.<sup>17</sup>

3.2 Registration on the title to the land

As an interest in land, profits à prendre can be registered on the title to land with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority. When registered, profits “run with the land.” This means that when the land is sold, the profit is transferred to the new landowner along with the title to the land. See Frequently Asked Questions About Farmland Access Agreements for more information on registration and legal security.

3.3 Multiple profits on one parcel of land or one profit on part of a parcel

A landowner can register multiple profits à prendre on one parcel of farmland or one profit on part of a parcel. For land in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR), permission from the Agricultural Land Commission (ALC) is not required.

3.4 Profit à prendre on the entire parcel

There are generally no legal restrictions to registering a profit à prendre on farmland in or out of the ALR. Permission of the ALC is not required.

3.5 How long can a profit à prendre last and how is it terminated?

Profits à prendre can be for any length of time. A profit terminates:

- at the end of the specified term in the profit,
- when the owner of the profit voluntarily gives up the profit with permission of the landowner (surrender),
- when the owner of the profit purchases the property from the landowner (merger),
- when the owner of the profit ceases to make use of it for a length of time where a reasonable owner may conclude it will no longer be used (abandonment),
- when a court orders the profit terminated (court order),

15 Interest in land: “A comprehensive term to describe any right, claim, or privilege that an individual has toward real ... property.” West’s Encyclopedia of American Law, edition 2. Copyright 2008 The Gale Group, Inc.

16 “An estate refers to the degree, quantity, nature and extent of ... ownership rights”. Cortesi, G. 2000. Mastering real estate principles, 3rd edition. Dearborn Trade Publishing.

17 Re-entry occurs when the landlord can re-enter the property and seize to satisfy outstanding obligations.

If a profit is registered, it is binding on the purchaser of the land for the term of the profit. A registered profit is not terminated when the land is sold unless there is a clause in the profit stating so. The owner of a profit can sell, lease, give away or bequeath the profit to someone else unless explicitly prohibited. Like a lease, a profit à prendre can pass to the successors on both sides. This is unlike a licence or memorandum of understanding, which can be considered contracts in law.

3.6 Mortgage

The person holding the profit à prendre can obtain a mortgage or loan using the profit à prendre as security. The agreement should state if the profit à prendre can be used to obtain a mortgage or loan.

3.7 Subprofits à prendre

A profit à prendre can (and is recommended to) stipulate if the profit à prendre holder can create a subprofit. A subprofit is an agreement between the profit à prendre holder and a third party for all or part of the profit à prendre (the right to remove something from the land such as crops and the access necessary to remove the item). The original profit à prendre agreement between the landowner and the profit à prendre holder remains in place. This means that the original profit à prendre holder, unless released from liability by the landowner, is still liable for the obligations under their original profit à prendre agreement with the landowner

A subprofit can be registered on title with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority. No approvals are required from the Agricultural Land Commission or an approving officer.

3.8 Suggested scenarios for use

A profit à prendre could be suitable in a situation where

- there are multiple registered agreements on one parcel of ALR land or
- one agreement on part of ALR land is desired or
- the land could be sold (registration ensures the profit goes with the land) and/or
- the profit à prendre holder would like to bequest their profit à prendre.

From a landowner perspective, a profit à prendre may decrease the value of the property if there are plans to on sell before the term of the profit à prendre expires.

4.0 LICENSE

The following provides information on licences, to assist you in developing your own licence agreement.

4.1 What is a licence?

A LICENCE GIVES A PERSON PERMISSION to do something on or with someone else's property. A licence, unlike a lease and a profit à prendre, is not an interest in land<sup>18</sup>. Hence a licence does not “run with the land” and is not enforceable against successors/purchasers of the land.

To be considered a contractual licence<sup>19</sup>, a licence must include:

1. an offer coupled with an acceptance;
2. an exchange of considerations, where something of value comes from each party; (e.g., one person pays rent in exchange for permission to use someone's property);
3. subject matter that is not illegal and
4. parties that are “competent to contract” (e.g., an adult or other legal entity like a cooperative).

4.2 Registration on the title to land

A LICENCE IS NOT an interest in land so it cannot be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority. A licence does not “run with the land.” This means that if the land is sold the licence is terminated, unless provided for otherwise in the contract of purchase and sale for the land. This is unlike a lease or a profit à prendre that are an interest in land, and when registered, do “run with the land.”

4.3 Multiple licences on one parcel of land or one licence on part of a parcel

A landowner can enter into multiple licence agreements for one parcel of land or one licence on part of a parcel of land. There are generally no legal restrictions to a landowner entering into one or more licence agreements in relation to farmland in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR). Permission of the Agricultural Land Commission is not required. There are generally no legal restrictions to a landowner entering into one or more licence agreements in relation to land not in the ALR.

4.4 License on the entire parcel

THERE ARE GENERALLY NO LEGAL RESTRICTIONS to having a licence on farmland in or out of the ALR.

18 Interest in land: “A comprehensive term to describe any right, claim, or privilege that an individual has toward real ... property.” West's Encyclopedia of American Law, edition 2. Copyright 2008 The Gale Group, Inc.

19 In a contractual licence, the licensor cannot terminate the licence at will if the terms of the licence are followed. A bare or gratuitous licence can be revoked at will.

4.5 How long can a licence last, and how is it terminated?

A LICENCE LASTS FOR A DEFINED PERIOD OF TIME. If it is a contractual licence (there is an exchange of considerations such as rent for permission to use the land), a licence terminates:

- at the end of the specified term in the licence,
- when the licensee voluntarily gives up the licence with permission of the landowner (surrender),
- when the landowner cancels the licence because the terms of the licence are not being followed,
- when the licensee or licensor becomes deceased or non-competent,
- when the licensee purchases the property from the landowner (merger),
- when the licensee ceases to make use of it for a length of time where a reasonable owner may conclude it will no longer be used (abandonment) or
- when a court orders the licence terminated (court order)

4.6 Mortgage

The person with a licence cannot take out a mortgage on that licence.

4.7 Sublicences

A LICENCE CAN (AND IS RECOMMENDED TO) STIPULATE if the licensee can enter into a sublicence, an agreement between the licensee and a third party for all or part of the primary licence. The original licence between the licensee and the landowner remains in place, and the original licensee, unless released from liability by the landowner, is still liable for the obligations under their original licence with the landowner.

A sublicence cannot be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority.

4.8 Suggested scenarios for use

A licence could be suitable in a situation where:

- multiple agreements on ALR land or an agreement on part of ALR land are desired, and the land is secured from sale/inheritance by a land trust or community organization; or
- a very specific use of the land is desired, for example, a grazing licence where the licensee can graze their sheep on the land, but does not have permission for other activities such as growing vegetables or servicing farm equipment; or
- the agreement is for a short-term period (e.g., three years) such as to ensure that land is temporarily kept in production or where it is a trial period between a farmer and landowner prior to entering into a more binding agreement such as a lease.

From a landowner perspective, a licence may not decrease the value of the property since the licence is not tied to the title of the land.

5.0 MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (MOU)

THE FOLLOWING PROVIDES general information on memoranda of understanding to support you in developing your own agreement.

5.1 What is a memorandum of understanding?

A MEMORANDUM OF UNDERSTANDING (MOU) is an agreement between at least two persons that obliges each party to do or not to do specified things. An MOU is not generally intended to be legally binding. However, if it meets the criteria for a contract, it can be legally binding under contract law.

An MOU, unlike a lease and a profit à prendre, is not an interest in land<sup>20</sup>. Hence an MOU does not run with the land and is not enforceable against successors/purchasers of the land. To be considered a contract, a MOU must:

- be an offer coupled with an acceptance;
- include an exchange of considerations, where something of value must come from each party (e.g., one person pays rent in exchange for using someone's property);
- include subject matter that is not illegal; and
- involve parties that are “competent to contract” (e.g., an adult or other legal entity like a cooperative).

5.2 Registration on title to the land

AN MOU IS NOT AN INTEREST IN LAND so it cannot be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority. An MOU does not “run with the land.” This means that if the land is sold the MOU is terminated unless agreed to otherwise by the vendor, purchaser and farmer. This is unlike a lease or a profit à prendre, which are an interest in land, and when registered, do “run with the land.”

5.3 Multiple MOUs on one parcel of land or one MOU on part of a parcel

A LANDOWNER CAN ENTER INTO MULTIPLE MOU AGREEMENTS for one parcel of land or one MOU on part of a parcel of land. There are generally no legal restrictions to a landowner entering into one or more MOU agreements in relation to farmland in the Agricultural Land Reserve (ALR). Permission of the Agricultural Land Commission (ALC) is not required. There are generally no legal restrictions to a landowner entering into one or more MOU agreements in relation to land not in the ALR.

5.4 MOU on the entire parcel

There are generally no legal restrictions to having an MOU on a parcel of land in or out of the ALR.

<sup>20</sup> Interest in land: “A comprehensive term to describe any right, claim, or privilege that an individual has toward real ... property.” West’s Encyclopedia of American Law, edition 2. Copyright 2008 The Gale Group, Inc.

5.5 How long can an MOU last, and how is it terminated?

A contractual MOU lasts for a defined period of time. An MOU terminates:

- at the end of the specified term in the MOU,
- when the person with the MOU voluntarily gives up the licence with permission of the landowner (surrender),
- when the landowner cancels the MOU because the terms of the MOU are not being followed,
- when one of the parties in the MOU becomes deceased or non-competent,
- when the person with the MOU purchases the property from the landowner (merger),
- when the person with the MOU ceases to make use of it for a length of time where a reasonable owner may concluded it will no longer be used (abandonment) or
- when a court orders the MOU terminated (court order).

5.6 Mortgage

Financial institutions, such as banks, generally do not accept MOUs as collateral for debt such as a mortgage.

5.7 Sub-MOUs

AN MOU CAN (AND IS RECOMMENDED TO) STIPULATE whether the non-property-owning party to the MOU can enter into a sub-MOU or multiple MOUs with third parties. These are agreements between the non-property-owning party and a third party for all or part of the primary MOU. The original MOU remains in place between the landowner and the non-property-owning party.

Under a sub-MOU, the third party takes over all or part of the MOU. However, the non-property-owning party to the original MOU, unless released from liability by the landowner, is still liable for the obligations under the original MOU with the landowner.

A sub-MOU cannot be registered with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority.

5.8 Suggested scenarios for use

MOUS MAY BE SUITABLE FOR:

- agreeing to the process for entering into a long-term agreement (e.g., outlining the obligations and responsibilities of parties in setting up a lease),
- acting as a temporary agreement between farmer and landowner while developing a longer-term agreement,
- acting as a temporary agreement while the landownership is uncertain (e.g., land is being leased from the Crown and sublet to a farmer),
- multiple agreements on ALR land or an agreement on part of ALR land are desired (licences are also suitable and may be more legally robust) or
- land is secured from sale/inheritance by a land trust or community organization (there is no concern that the MOU does not run with the land — licences are also suitable and may be more legally robust).

From a landowner perspective, an MOU may not decrease the value of the property since the MOU is not tied to the title of the land.

6.0 FREQUENTLY ASKED QUESTIONS

THE FOLLOWING PROVIDES ANSWERS to some general questions related to farmland access agreements. Topics include: selecting access agreements, BC Assessment (Farm Classification); bona fide farmer status; not-for-profit tax status; ownership of buildings; registering an agreement on title; liability; loans and mortgages, and the tenancy acts. While not a comprehensive list of issues the answers found here should help resolve your basic questions and stimulate thought about others.

Selecting a type of access agreement

1. When the land is being farmed during a transition period (e.g., trial period for three years), what type of agreement is most suitable – one that gives an interest in land or one that does not? For example, a short-term lease or a licence or MOU?

From the landowner's perspective, an MOU or a licence that does not give an interest in land may be most suitable for a temporary/short-term agreement. The short-term agreement could include terms promising a lease or a profit à prendre following, if certain conditions are met.

2. Does a registered agreement (lease, profit à prendre) provide greater legal security for the farmer?

Yes. If an agreement is registered, the landowner or future landowner cannot ignore the interests<sup>21</sup> granted to the farmer by the agreement.

However, there are two situations in which a landowner or future landowner must abide by an unregistered agreement:<sup>22</sup>

- when a registration of an interest (e.g., lease) is pending,
- when there is a lease or agreement for lease for a period of time not exceeding three years and there is actual occupation under the lease or agreement

Licenses and memorandums of understanding cannot be registered since they are not an interest in land. These agreements are valid against only those parties who made them, not their successors, assigns or other beneficiaries. Conversely, registered agreements “run with the land” and must be taken into account by the landowner, even if the land is sold to a new person.

Farm Classification

BC Assessment

3. Who applies for farm classification – the landowner or the farmer using the land?

The landowner must apply to BC Assessment for farm classification.

4. If there are multiple farmers on one piece of land, how does BC Assessment handle farm classification? How does this affect bona fide farmer status and ability to apply for a Farmer ID card?

If several farmers are using the same property, under individual agreements, each individual would need to meet the income requirements for farm classification separately. Income requirements are based on the area of land under farm use<sup>23</sup>. Each farmer would then be eligible to apply for their Farmer ID card.

If several farmers are using the same property, they could form a legal entity (e.g., a cooperative) and have one overall access agreement. In that case, BC Assessment would look at the combined farm income and land area when considering farm classification. As long as the land receives farm classification, individual farmers should then be able to apply for their Farmer ID card.

5. BC Assessment, under the Assessment Act, provides for farm classification in situations where the land is leased to a farmer. What if the access agreement is a licence, a memorandum of understanding or a profit à prendre with a farmer rather than a lease? How does this affect farm classification, bona fide farmer status and ability to apply for a Farmer ID card?

In these situations it will be necessary to work with BC Assessment as these agreements are not clearly specified within the Assessment Act.

The degree of control and management over the land by the landowner and the farmer will influence who is seen as the “farmer” by BC Assessment.

If the landowner is relinquishing control and management of the land, the farmer would likely qualify as a type of “lessee” under the Assessment Act. In that case, the landowner would apply for farm classification, and if received, the farmer “leasing” the land could then apply for bona fide farmer status and their Farmer ID card.

If the landowner or an umbrella organization, such as a farmers’ cooperative, has an overall land control and management role, BC Assessment may decide that the landowner or organization is “the farmer.” In this case, if several farmers are using the same property, their individual farm incomes would be pooled to determine if they meet the income requirements for farm classification. As long as the land receives farm classification, individual farmers should then be able to apply for their Farmer ID card.<sup>24</sup>

6. What does a lease have to contain for BC Assessment to consider an application for farm classification?

- names and signatures of the lessee (farmer) and lessor (owner),
- the legal or other well-defined description of the land being leased,
- the commencement date,
- the signing date,
- the duration of the lease,
- size of the lease area,
- rent or other compensation paid for the lease and
- the intended use of the leased land<sup>25</sup>

Bona fide farmer status and Farmer ID Card

7. If farm classification is given to the landowner, how does the farmer using the land apply for bona fide farmer status?

As long as BC Assessment classifies the land as “Farm,” then the person farming the land is eligible for bona fide farmer status and can apply for their Farmer ID card. The BC Agriculture Council requires a copy of the current access agreement (e.g., lease), the most recent property assessment, the completed Farmer ID card application and application payment.

Not-for-profit tax status

8. If a not-for-profit organization has tax-exempt status on a property under the Community Charter or the Taxation (Rural Area) Act, do they lose that tax exemption when they enter into an agreement with a farmer who uses the land for a farm business?

Generally this would not be the case; however, it is possible that the tax-exempt status of the land may be lost. The same provincial laws that give not-for-profits exemption from property tax contain wording that may remove the tax exemption of the land if it is used by a farm business.

If a landowner has tax-exempt status, it would be advisable to consult a lawyer regarding what affect a farmer accessing the land would have on that tax-exempt status.

Ownership of buildings

9. Can a house or other building be owned separately from the land? For example, can a farmer own a house on land they are leasing from the landowner?

A building can be owned separately from the land if the building is not considered to be permanently attached.

Under property law,<sup>26</sup> there are two types of property – real property and personal property. Real property includes the land and anything attached to the land, including buildings that can be considered permanently attached. Real property belongs to the landowner. Personal property (sometimes called “chattels”) is any property that is not real property. For example, a mobile trailer is personal property and can be owned by the farmer, not the landowner.

Registering an agreement on title

10. Can more than one lease be registered against the title to a property?

Yes. Leases on part of a parcel of land and longer than three years, or that have the option to be extended past three years, are considered subdivisions under section 73 of the Land Title Act. Before the lease(s) can be registered, the subdivision process must be followed and given approval by an approving officer. The type of approving officer depends on where the property is located. Properties in municipalities gain approval from municipal approving officers (usually the Director of Planning or Engineering). Rural subdivisions in electoral areas of regional districts seek approval from the Ministry of Transportation and Highways through the regional district or Islands Trust. Property covered by the Nisga’a Agreement gains approval from the Nisga’a approving officer.

Agricultural Land Reserve

When land is located in the Agricultural Land Reserve, you also require permission from the Agricultural Land Commission to register multiple leases on the properties title.

See section 2.0 on leases and Appendix C, Enforcement of Long-term Leases and Subdivision for more information.

11. Can multiple profits à prendre be registered against the title to a property?

Yes.

Liability

12. If the farmer(s) take out a loan, is the landowner liable if the farmer defaults?

Generally, no. The loan is a personal contract between the farmer and the person or organization providing the loan. The landowner may be affected where the farmer defaults and the person or organization providing the loan attempts to seize the assets of the farmer that may be on the land.

13. Does the landowner have the option of re-entry on a profit à prendre like they do with a lease?

No. [It would depend on the terms of the instrument – it may be a good idea for the landowner to have that right upon certain defaults by the farmer]

Loans and mortgages

14. How can farmers who are renting farmland get a loan or a mortgage?

Farmers can take out a mortgage or loan against a lease or profit à prendre (see Sections 2.0 Lease and 3.0 Profit à Prendre). The agreement should specify if the farmer is allowed to do so.

When farmers rent land, the risks for lending institutions include:

- The potential loss of the rented land. Having a long-term leases on land held in trust mitigates some of this risk.
- Farmers having sufficient cash flow to pay for crop inputs, land rental payments, operating expenses, living expenses and debt payments until they receive cash inflow from the farm's production.

Farm Credit Canada (FCC) makes loans for land and equipment purchases, as well as any improvements to property. Clients are normally required to have a minimum of 25% equity in what is being purchased and used as security.

For some deals, using existing equity in land or equipment is done by placing a charge against it and the new purchase. FCC prefers new farmers to demonstrate financial progress through one or more years of farm operation before making credit available.

As far as the lands goes, FCC could finance any improvements made to the property if the land owner would be willing to have FCC place a mortgage relating to the improvements on the property. The owner would effectively be the mortgagee, with the renter could possibly be being a guarantor<sup>27</sup>.

Micro-credit is another option for farmers who do not own the land they are farming. Farmers looking to finance a small business and having trouble getting credit from traditional sources may be eligible for micro-credit. According to Finance Canada, micro-credit “refers to small loans made to low-income individuals to sustain self-employment or start up very small businesses.”<sup>28</sup> Micro-credit loans are generally small, amounting to a few thousand dollars (e.g., under $25,000). Micro-credit is either community based or is accessed through specific programs (community development corporations, community-based organizations, credit unions, government and non-government programs). For example, VanCity Savings Credit Union has a peer lending program that provides loans to groups of three to six business owners, each borrowing for their own business. According to VanCity, lack of assets, traditional collateral or credit history will not necessarily prevent access to business credit with them.

Tenancy Acts

15. Does the Commercial Tenancy Act or the Residential Tenancy Act apply when farmland with a residence is leased?

Farmland and associated housing leased under one agreement falls under the Commercial Tenancy Act, not the Residential Tenancy Act. According to the Residential Tenancy Act, section 4, it does not apply to: “living accommodation included with premises that (i) are primarily occupied for business purposes, and (ii) are rented under a single agreement.” The Act also does not apply to “(i) living accommodations rented under a tenancy agreement that has a term longer than 20 years.” If the land and the house on the land are leased in two separate agreements, the Commercial Tenancy Act applies to the land and the Residential Tenancy Act applies to the house.<sup>29</sup> It is in the farmers’ interest to lease the house separately as the Residential Tenancy Act provides stronger protection for tenants.

28 Small businesses in this case refer to businesses with five or fewer employees and gross revenues of less than $500,000.

SECTION II – RECOMMENDED CLAUSES

DEFINITIONS AND INTERPRETATIONS

5. (use this section to define specific words or clauses used in the Agreement that you feel are important e.g. “Farm House” means the primary residence on the Lands, as identified in the Whole Farm Management Plan appended to this Agreement)

TERMINATION

6. This Agreement may be terminated by:
- a) ____ days written notice from the Lessee to the Lessor before termination; or
  - b) abandonment by the Lessee for a period greater than ____ days; or
  - c) on the non-payment of rent when due or non-performance of the covenants contained herein, by either party through serving written notice citing the instance(s) of default and specifying a termination date of _____ days from the date of such notice.; or
  - d) the Lessee becomes insolvent or bankrupt and takes the benefit of any act that may be in force for bankrupt or insolvent debtors; or
  - e) the interests of the Lessee are seized or taken in execution or attachment by any creditor of the Lessee; or
  - f) the Lessee makes an assignment for the benefit of his creditors.

7. If this Agreement is terminated under the terms (b) or (c) in Section 6, the Lessee may:
  - a) take possession of the Lands or any part thereof without previous notice of intention (or offer of the Adjusted Sales Value as in Sections __, __ and __); and
  - b) remove all persons and property from the Lands;
8. Notwithstanding the termination or expiry of the Agreement, the Lessee shall continue to be liable to the Lessor for all payments due and obligations assumed under this Agreement.

OWNERSHIP AND TRANSFER

9. The Lessee owns all personal property improvements (chattels) made on the Lands at their expense or on their behalf during the period of time covered by this Agreement.
10. All improvements to the real property (fixtures) made on or to the Lands at the Lessee expense or on their behalf during the period of time covered by this Agreement remain on the Lands, without any form of compensation to the Lessee at the termination of this Agreement.

SUBORDINATION, NON-DISTURBANCE AND ATTORNMENT CLAUSES

These clauses are vital for the interests of both the Lessor and Lessee. They should be crafted individually for each agreement.

Generally, if a landowner leases out their property after putting a mortgage on the land, the person leasing the property can be asked to vacate the land if the landowner defaults on their loan and the lender takes over the land. This is true even if the lease is registered. If a mortgage is placed on the land after it is leased the lease has priority and the lender cannot ask the lessee to leave. The landowner may insist on a subordination clause in the lease that gives the mortgage priority even if the mortgage is done after the lease. Again, in this situation if the landowner defaults on their loan the person leasing the land can be asked to vacate by the lender taking over the land. If the land is leased or is likely to be leased it is in the lending institutions interest to require landlords to include subordination clauses in their leases before a mortgage will be approved.

If the person leasing the land is faced with subordination clauses or knows that there is a mortgage prior to the lease, they should ensure the lease agreement includes a non-disturbance clause. This clause(s) will ensure that the lender foreclosing on the loan will not disturb the possession rights of the lessee as long as the lessee continues to meet the terms of the lease.

An attornment clause means that the lessee is promising to recognize the lender as their landlord when the original landlord defaults on their mortgage obligations. A well written attornment clause will include an obligation by the lessee to become the tenant of any successor in title the lender might put in place.

Sample clauses:

Subordination:

This Lease is and will be subject, subordinate, and postponed to all Mortgages to the extent that without execution of any document other than this Lease, the Mortgages will have priority over this Lease notwithstanding the respective dates of execution, delivery, or registration of them. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Tenant agrees to promptly execute any document in confirmation of such subordination and postponement of this Lease to any of the Mortgages, provided however that such subordination or postponement will not be effective with respect to a specific Mortgage unless and until the Landlord's Mortgagee holding such Mortgage confirms in writing to the Tenant that the Tenant has the right, if not in default under this Lease, to remain in possession of the Premises in accordance with the terms of this Lease in the event that such Landlord's Mortgage obtains title to the Premises by way of foreclosure or otherwise.

Attornment

Whenever required by any of the Landlord's Mortgagees under any of the Mortgages, or in the event of an exercise by any of the Landlord's Mortgagees of the power of sale in any of the Mortgages, the Tenant will attorn to and become, in each case, a tenant of such Landlord's Mortgagees or any purchaser from such Landlord's Mortgagee for the then unexpired residue of the Term upon all of the terms and conditions of this Lease.

LESSEE OBLIGATIONS

In any such event the Lessee shall reimburse the Lessor for all costs and expenses (including actual legal fees and disbursements expended) incurred by the Lessee, if the Lessor, in addition to any other right or remedy, discharges any claim of lien from the Lands by paying the amount claimed to be due or by procuring a discharge of such liens by deposit of such amount in the appropriate court:

The Lessor may enter the Lands and do the said work and pay the said expenses all at the expense of the Lessee. The Lessor may only give such notice if the requested repairs are reasonably necessary and not purely cosmetic;

NON-WAIVER

14. If the Lessor does not insist upon strict performance of any of the conditions in this Agreement this is not a waiver or relinquishment for the future of any such condition unless the Lessor gives a waiver in writing. The acceptance of any rent or performance of any Agreement condition by a person other than the Lessee shall not be construed as an admission by the Lessor of any right, title or interest of any such persons as a sub-tenant, assignee, transferee or otherwise in place and stead of the Lessee.

OWNERSHIP AND TRANSFER

9. The Transferee owns all personal property improvements (chattels) made on the Lands at their expense or on their behalf during the period of time covered by this Agreement.
10. All improvements to the real property (fixtures) made on or to the Lands at the Transferee expense or on their behalf during the period of time covered by this Agreement remain on the Lands, without any form of compensation to the Transferee at the termination of this Agreement.

SUBORDINATION, NON-DISTURBANCE AND ATTORNMENT CLAUSES

These clauses are vital for the interests of both the Transferor and Transferee. They should be crafted individually for each agreement.

Generally, if a landowner registers a profit on their property after putting a mortgage on the land, the person with the profit can be asked to vacate the land (profit cancelled) if the landowner defaults on their loan and the lender takes over the land. If a mortgage is placed on the land after the profit is registered, the profit has priority and the lender cannot ask the transferee to leave. The landowner may insist on a subordination clause in the lease that gives the mortgage priority even if the mortgage is done after the profit is registered. Again, in this situation if the landowner defaults on their loan the person with the profit can be asked vacate by the lender taking over the land. If the land has a registered profit or is likely to have a registered profit it is in the lending institutions interest to require landlords to include subordination clauses in their profit à prendre agreement before a mortgage will be approved.

If the person with the profit is faced with subordination clauses or knows that there is a mortgage prior to the profit being registered, they should ensure the profit à prendre agreement includes a non-disturbance clause. This clause(s) will ensure that the lender foreclosing on the loan will not disturb the rights of the transferee as long as the transferee continues to meet the terms of the profit à prendre.

An attornment clause means that the transferee is promising to recognize the lender as their landlord when the original landlord defaults on their mortgage obligations. A well written attornment clause will include an obligation by the transferee to recognize the successor in title the lender might put in place.

Sample clauses:

Subordination:

This Lease is and will be subject, subordinate, and postponed to all Mortgages to the extent that without execution of any document other than this Lease, the Mortgages will have priority over this Lease notwithstanding the respective dates of execution, delivery, or registration of them. Without limiting the generality of the foregoing, the Tenant agrees to promptly execute any document in confirmation of such subordination and postponement of this Lease to any of the Mortgages, provided however that such subordination or postponement will not be effective with respect to a specific Mortgage unless and until the Landlord's Mortgagee holding such Mortgage confirms in writing to the Tenant that the Tenant has the right, if not in default under this Lease, to remain in possession of the Premises in accordance with the terms of this Lease in the event that such Landlord's Mortgage obtains title to the Premises by way of foreclosure or otherwise.

Attornment

Whenever required by any of the Landlord's Mortgagees under any of the Mortgages, or in the event of an exercise by any of the Landlord's Mortgagees of the power of sale in any of the Mortgages, the Tenant will attorn to and become, in each case, a tenant of such Landlord's Mortgagees or any purchaser from such Landlord's Mortgagee for the then unexpired residue of the Term upon all of the terms and conditions of this Lease.

- 15. All activities giving rise to breach or threatening a breach of this Agreement, or giving rise to a disagreement as to the meaning of this Agreement must immediately cease upon receipt of the notice.
- 16. The parties must attempt to resolve the matter, acting reasonably and in good faith, within ___ Business Days of receipt of the notice.
- 17. If the parties are not able to resolve the matter within that time, the parties may appoint a mutually acceptable person to mediate the matter. The parties must act reasonably and in good faith and cooperate with the mediator and with each other in an attempt to resolve the matter within ___ days after the mediator is appointed.
- 18. The cost of the mediation will be borne equally between the parties, which costs will not include costs incurred by a party for representation by counsel at the mediation.

NON-WAIVER

- 19. The failure of the Licensor to insist upon strict performance of any condition in this License or to exercise the right or option hereunder shall not be construed or operate as a waiver or relinquishment for the future of any such condition or option and no waiver shall be inferred from or implied by any thing done or omitted by the Licensor, save only express waiver in writing. The acceptance of any rent or performance of any obligation hereunder by a person other than the Licensee shall not be construed as an admission by the Licensor of any right, title or interest of any such persons as a sub-tenant, assignee, transferee or otherwise in place and stead of the Licensee.

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR

20. Licensee enters into this Agreement as an independent contractor and in no sense is the Licensee or any of the Licensee's employees, invitees or agents to be considered an agent of or under the control of the Licensor. No inspection undertaken by the Licensor, granting of a consent by the Licensor, delivery of plans, specifications or other information to the Licensor nor Licensee's compliance with any orders or directions given by the Licensor shall relieve Licensee from complying with, or derogate from Licensee's obligations to comply with, the Licensee's obligations under this Agreement. Without limiting the foregoing, the Licensor is under no obligation to review any plans or specifications delivered by Licensee to the Licensor pursuant to section ____ to inspect, repair or maintain the Lands or any improvements under section ____, nor insure any improvements made or installed by or on behalf of Licensee.

INDEMNITY AND RELEASE

21. The Licensee shall indemnify and save harmless the Licensor, its directors, officers, employees and agents from all claims, demands, losses, costs and expenses (including actual legal costs and disbursements expended) and damages based upon, arising out of or connected with the use of the Lands by the Licensee or for any action taken or things done or maintained in connection with this Agreement, the intent being that the Licensor shall be at no expense, or loss, to which it would not have been put but for this Agreement.
22. The Licensee shall not hold the Licensor liable for any injury or damage to any person or property on, in or about the Lands, howsoever such damage may be occasioned. All risks of any such injury being assumed by the Lessee, who shall hold the Licensor harmless and indemnified therefrom.

NOTICE

23. Wherever any notice is required to be given to either party under the terms of this Agreement, the notice shall be in writing and shall be deemed to be sufficiently given if forwarded by registered mail addressed as follows:

If to the Lessor:

_____ (Name)
_____ (address)

If to the Licensee:

_____ (Name)
_____ (address)

25. Amendments and alterations to this Agreement shall be in writing, shall be signed by both the Licensee and the Licensor and shall be appended to this Agreement.
26. Licensee is not to assign or sell in whole or in part this Agreement without the Licensor's prior consent in writing.
27. The headings in this Agreement form no part hereof and shall be deemed to have been inserted for convenience only.
28. Time is of the essence of this Agreement.
29. This Agreement is the complete and exclusive agreement between the parties and it supercedes all other agreements whether oral or written, including without limitation, _____
(description of any previous agreements) and any prescriptive rights the Licensee may have or may acquire by operation of law.

SECTION III - OPTIONAL CLAUSES

Optional clauses for farmland trusts or others

The Licensee agrees to work cooperatively with the Licensor towards a satisfactory management regime as recorded in the Whole Farm Management Plan (Schedule ____).

The Licensee shall allow access for the Licensor public use of the Lands, including Licensor led public events (can specify details), subject to _____ (e.g. ____ days of written notice from the Licensor).

The Licensee shall maintain membership in _____ for the duration of this Agreement.

General optional clauses

The Licensee shall follow the most recent version of the "British Columbia Certified Organic Production Operation Policies and Management Standards" published by the Certified Organic Associations of British Columbia. Certification by the Licensee is not required. Exceptions to these policies and management standards must be agreed to in writing between the Licensee and the Licensor and appended to this Agreement.

The Licensee, as stated in Section ____ is in no way an agent or representative of the Licensor nor is in partnership with the Licensor and shall not be represented as such by either the Licensee or the Licensor;

- a) The Licensee shall, beyond the normal activities of the _____, acquire written agreement from the Licensor prior to using the Licensor's name and other the

- Licensor representations, such as, but not limited to, logos, for marketing, promotion and other activities related to the Farm Business and the Lands;
- b) the Licensor shall, beyond the normal activities of the _____, acquire written permission from the Licensee prior to using the Farm Business name or other representations of the Farm Business in public.

Appendix B — Farmland Trusts and Farmland Access Agreements

WHEN A FARMLAND TRUST MAKES LAND AVAILABLE to farmers for farming, the land is held in trust and will not be sold. This is in contrast to most other farmland access agreement situations where the land may be sold at the landowner's discretion.

Since the land is held in trust, farmland trusts can use this opportunity to provide farmers with land in a way that is similar to land ownership. Two key components of land ownership that differ from renting land are: the ability to stay on the land for the long term (10 plus years); and when the farmer leaves the land, their investment (equity) is compensated through sale of the land.

If, as a farmland trust, you want to make land accessible to farmers in a way that is similar to land ownership, you should consider the following when designing access agreements:

- provide for long-term tenure (10 years or more),
- include a clause stipulating the land will not be sold, and
- account for equity by providing a means to buy out the farm business and improvements when the farmer leaves the land (see below for sample clauses).

You may also want to include a means of encouraging, supporting and requiring sustainable farming practices in your agreement.

As a farmland trust, you may think you should be giving farmers “a deal” on land rental rates to encourage and support farming in your community. However, this may create resentment in neighbouring farmers and may lead to unfair business competition. To help business competition to remain equitable in your community and to prevent hard feelings, you should be familiar with the standard rental rates for farmland in your area and keep your rental rates in line with those values.

Farmland trusts can use access agreements to account for equity by using clauses such as:

(farmland trust) shall retain the Right of First Refusal to purchase the Farm Business and all improvements at their local replacement cost less depreciation, obsolescence and damage when this Lease expires or is terminated according to the terms in Section __ .

Should (farmland trust) fail to exercise its Right of First Refusal or fail to offer the Adjusted Sales Value the Lessee may find a buyer and (farmland trust) shall negotiate a lease with the potential buyer, such a lease being, in all respects, except the name of the Lessee and the Effective Date, identical to the then current Lease.

If no acceptable buyer is found within three hundred and sixty five (365) days of expiry or termination of this Lease (farmland trust) shall assume ownership of and title to the Farm Business and all improvements. (farmland trust) shall develop a payment plan in cooperation with the Lessee to pay the Lessee out at the Adjusted Sales Value when (farmland trust) is able to sell the Farm Business and improvements, or rent the Lands or hire a farmer for the Lands.

Appendix C — Enforcement of Long-term Leases and Subdivision<sup>30</sup>

Leasing and subdivision

UNDER CANADIAN LAW, a lease on part of a property is considered a type of subdivision when the lease is for a term longer than 3 years. For example, if a landowner leases a specific area of his property to a farmer for 12 years, the property is considered subdivided for 12 years.

The Land Title Act, section 73 states that when part of property is leased for longer than three years, the property must go through the subdivision requirements outlined in section 7 of the Act. The subdivision must be approved by an approving officer, and this approval only carries for the term of that particular lease. When the lease terminates, so does the subdivision. The subdivided areas cannot be transferred separately under this approval (e.g., the owner cannot sell the leased area as a separate lot from the original property). In 2007, the legislature amended section 73 to clarify that leases longer than three years that do not meet the subdivision requirements are not unenforceable

Implications

A NEWS RELEASE from the BC Ministry of Agriculture and Lands on June 23, 2007, “Amendments Enhance Opportunities for Farmers” (2007AL0030-000849), states the change to the Land Title Act will “ensure that long-term agreements to lease unsubdivided land are enforceable between the parties even if the leases do not comply with the subdivision and registration requirements set out in the Act.”

<sup>30</sup> Information from Johnson, P. 2007. Subdivision Requirements And The Enforcement Of Long Term Leases. Staples, McDannold, Stewart Barristers and Solicitors. <http://sms.bc.ca/logo/2008/winter/winter2007-4.html>

However, it is important to keep in mind that the Land Title Act still requires subdivision of land into smaller parcels for leases longer than three years. While ignoring the subdivision requirements will not result in charges against you, and the 2007 amendment provides that leases longer than three years are not unenforceable regardless if the subdivision requirements are met, you should consider the following points before deciding to enter into a long-term lease agreement without following the subdivision requirements:

- Long-term leases may be unrecognized violation of local government zoning bylaws (e.g., minimum parcel size)<sup>31</sup>;
- It is unknown at this time how much protection the courts will give the interests of parties who have not followed the subdivision requirements, especially if there are conflicts with local government regulations; and
- An unregistered lease may be treated in law as a valid agreement between the parties, but an unregistered lease may not convey an interest in land, as per section 20 of the Land Title Act.

It is up to the landowner and the potential lessee to decide what degree of certainty they want in how enforceable their lease agreement it.

<sup>31</sup> A lease on a part of a property is still considered a subdivision even if the approval process is not followed and related regulations still apply (e.g, lot size, number of buildings allowed on lot etc).

Appendix D — General Agreement Completion Checklist<sup>32</sup>

THE PURPOSE OF THIS CHECKLIST is to ensure your agreement contains all the required clauses, as well as to help you evaluate the types of clauses that are recommended or optional. Note that the lease (see Sample Lease in Appendix A) is used as a basis for this checklist, but the checklist can be applied to profits à prendre, licences, and memoranda of understanding as well.

Required clauses

- Names and Addresses of the parties entering into the agreement
- Description of the Property, including the common legal description (e.g., Address, Property Identifier (PID), Lot, Section, District), specifies any areas or buildings excluded/included and states that the person providing the lease is the registered owner of the land.
- Grant of Lease grants the lease to the lessee. If necessary, can include provisions to the grant (e.g., subject to any public right of way, watercourse or public easement on the land).
- Term of Lease states when the lease starts and how long it lasts. Although not required, it is recommended that this section address renewal/review of the lease, if that is a consideration, and state when and how such a renewal would happen.
- Rent Payable states what the amount of the rent is, how it is calculated, when it is to be paid and to whom.

Recommended clauses

Note that these recommended clauses are based on both a general perspective of “this is what is good to have in an agreement” and the desire to have long-term agreements that encourage sustainable farm management practices.

- Definitions and Interpretations provides definitions of terms and phrases used in the lease (e.g., “Farm House” means the primary residence on the lands, as identified in the Whole Farm Management Plan)
- Termination of the Lease describes how the lease will be terminated. This can include expiry of the lease, the lessee defaulting on the lease or either party wanting to break the lease.
- Ownership and Transfer details who owns improvements and property when the lease terminates.
- Subordination, Non-disturbance and Attornment details if the lease takes priority over the mortgage if the landowner defaults on their mortgage, if the lessee will be required to vacate if the mortgage is defaulted on and if the lessee will accept the party taking over the land as the new landlord.
- Insurance lays out who is responsible for insurance coverage and that the coverage is adequate (e.g., occupiers liability insurance and fire insurance). Includes release of the landowner from liability related to activities on the property.
- Right to Assign or Sublet Lease specifies when the tenant can assign or sublet the lease. If this is not specified, the tenant can assign or sublet the lease without the landowner’s permission. If the landowner allows assignment or sublet with written permission, they cannot unreasonably withhold permission.
- Utilities and Taxes assigns responsibility for utilities and taxes associated with the property (e.g., lessee is responsible for water and electricity).
- Dispute Resolution provides a formal mechanism for dealing with disputes between landowner and tenant. This may reduce the possibility of long and expensive court proceedings.
- Non-waiver explains that if the landowner does not enforce the conditions in the lease on the lessee, the conditions still hold and inaction by the landlord is not a waiver of the terms of the lease.
- Independent Contractor lays out that the lease or parties associated with the lease are not in partnership and actions the landowner takes do not take away from the lessee’s obligations to comply with the terms of the lease.
- Notice describes how notice is to be given to either party and provides the appropriate contact information (e.g., written notice through registered mail).

<sup>32</sup> Modified and expanded from Gamble, R.W. October 2001. Land lease arrangements. Ontario Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Rural Affairs, AG-DEX 812.

- Privacy stipulates that the landowner will not interfere with the privacy of the tenant.
- Land Use states how the tenant is going to use the land and can include stipulation of farming practices (e.g., normal farming practices or organic standards). A clause on what condition the land is to be left in after the lease terminates should be included. If buildings are present, stipulate how they can be used and what condition they need to be left in.
- Maintenance assigns responsibility and costs for upkeep of the lands and associated buildings, including reimbursing the landowner if the lessee does not carry out reasonably requested repairs.
- Environmental Matters covers environmental responsibilities and policies. If there is an environmental problem, the landowner is ultimately responsible for activities on the land; hence, the tenant should agree that as the user of the land they will adhere to relevant legislation and farm practices. The tenant should be held responsible for any costs incurred in an environmental cleanup/remediation.
- Right of Inspection gives the landowner permission to enter the property under described circumstances.
- Right of Removal of Crops gives the tenant the right to complete the harvesting of their crop after the termination of the lease or be compensated for the loss of that crop.
- Relations specify the tenant will use the property in a socially responsible manner and not annoy the neighbours.
- Binding on Legal Representatives means the terms of the agreement will be binding on heirs, executors, administrators, successors and assigns of the parties entering into the agreement.
- Amendments and Alterations enables the parties to make changes to the lease.
- Acknowledgement of Encumbrances is where the tenant acknowledges that their interest in the land comes with encumbrances under the lease.
- Agreement of Governance states that the lessee and landowner agree the lease is in accordance with and governed by BC and Canadian law.
- Headings stipulate that any headings used in the lease do not form part of the lease and are only for making the reading of the lease easier.
- Complete and Exclusive Agreement states that the lease supersedes any other agreements between the parties and any rights the lessee may have through law.

Optional clauses

Where the land is owned privately, by a company or by a community organization

- Transfer of Property provides an agreement that balances the landowner's desire to sell and the tenant's desire to have the lease unaffected, if the property can be sold (e.g., it is not held in perpetuity by a land trust).
- Right of First Refusal gives tenants the first option to purchase the property if the landowner offers it for sale.
- Notice of Interest under the Builders Lien Act gives the landlord the option of posting a Notice of Interest on the land for the purposes of the Builders Lien Act.

Where the land is owned in perpetuity by a land trust

- Land Security addresses the landowner's responsibility not to sell the land or use it for other activities outside of the lease.
- Ownership and Transfer specify items such as who owns the improvements, right of first refusal for the farm business and compensation for capital invested by the tenant. It is standard in leases that improvements deemed to be real property (affixed to the land) stay with the land when the lease is terminated without compensation to the tenant unless specified. This section should include how the parties will calculate the value of compensation for improvements.
- New Construction and Major Capital Investment provides an option for the landowner to help fund major improvements to the property.
- Whole Farm Management Plan requires the landowner and tenant to work in collaboration to develop and keep up to date a general management plan for the property.
- Public Access describes how public access to the land will be arranged between the farmer and the landowner.
- Public Representation outlines when and how the landowner and the farmer will represent each other in public.
- Membership stipulates that the lessee must maintain a membership in the land trust that owns the land.

Housing

- Housing provides how the housing (if present) is to be used (e.g., only for housing the farmer and family) and if additional housing can be constructed.

Where more than one legal entity is signing the lease as the lessee

- Memorandum of Understanding refers to the parties making up the lessee entering into a requested MOU and the MOU being appended to the lease and provided to the landowner. The clauses stipulate that debts will be pursued from all members of the MOU and that the landowner is not responsible for the relations between those signing the MOU. Finally, it clarifies how debts and equity will be handled in relation to the members of the MOU.

Appendix E — Leases and Easements

BEFORE THE 2007 AMENDMENT TO THE LAND TITLE ACT addressing leases longer than three years (See Enforcement of Long-Term Leases and Subdivision on page **), parties seeking greater security for landowners and those leasing the land explored other types of agreements. Using an easement with a lease is one means of providing access to part of a parcel of land without needing to go through the subdivision process.

What is an easement?

AN EASEMENT GIVES ACCESS TO or use of another's land or waterway. It is an interest in land, but unlike a lease, it does not include the right to exclusive possession. If it does grant exclusive possession, courts may interpret the agreement as a lease. Easements can grant exclusive occupation.

Each easement has a servient and a dominant tenement. The servient tenement is the land that has the easement on it. The dominant tenement is the land that benefits from or holds the easement. For example, an easement such as a right-of-way across one property (servient tenement) provides access to a tree lot on another property (dominant tenement). This requirement for two parcels of land makes using an easement with a lease impractical for many farmers securing access to land because these farmers may not have land adjacent to the parcel for which access is sought that can act as the dominant tenement.

While easements can be affirmative (allowing the person benefiting from the easement to do certain things) or negative (preventing the person using the easement from doing certain things), it cannot impose positive obligations on the person using the easement. For example, the person using the land covered by the easement cannot be bound to maintain, repair or improve the land and buildings covered by the easement.

As an interest in land, an easement can be registered on title with the BC Land Title and Survey Authority.

Using an easement with a lease<sup>33</sup>

A LANDOWNER CAN LEASE TO A FARMER all or part of a building on their land and then grant an easement appurtenant<sup>34</sup> to the lease over the part of the land the farmer is to use. The Land Title Act, s. 3(3) states that the general prohibition against leasing a portion of a parcel of land does not apply to buildings or part of a building. Hence the building lease and the easement do not require approval from an approving officer. Note that, for the agreements to be registered, the Land Title Office will require a plan clearly identifying which building is being leased and may challenge the definition of building. Sometimes utility huts and accessory structures can be considered buildings.

REQUIREMENTS FOR A VALID EASEMENT<sup>35,36</sup>

- A dominant and servient tenement are required. This means the farmer must have access to two adjoining parcels of land. Since a lease is an interest in land, an easement can be appurtenant to a lease.
- The easement has to be for the use and benefit of the dominant tenement.

<sup>36</sup> Little, D.W., MacInnis, A. & Mullen, M. (2004). Easements, covenants and similar rights in British Columbia: An overview. Fasken Martineau DuMoulin LLP.

- Under common law, the dominant and servient owners have to be different people. For example, since a landowner already has the right to cross over their land, they could not give themselves further right to do so through an easement. However, in BC, section 18(5) of the Property Law Act allows parties to grant themselves an easement.
- The easement needs to be capable of forming the subject matter of a grant:
  - a. The right(s) granted must be fairly specific;
  - b. The easement cannot grant exclusive and unrestricted use of land;
  - c. The grantee must be a specific “person” and must have an interest in the dominant tenement at the time of the grant; and
  - d. There must be a grantor capable of granting the right.
